distinctly shown when the invaders got down to business yesterday. The opening game of the Feds drew 27.622 fans to the new park, and, 'o make everybody happy. Baitimore defeated Buffalo 3 to 2. Right across the street the New York Giants battled Jack Dunn's Orioles before 8.000 fans, so it is easily seen how popular baseball is in the Monumental City.

"Baltimore has done itself proud." said President James A. Gilmore, "in railying to the standard of the Federal League. We shall do all in our power to bring league baseball to this city."

Jack Quinn, former Highlander, twirled brilliantly for Baltimore and would have whitewashed his opponenta, had it not been for weak support at critical times. The score:

Rochester Rambler, Who Hopes to Do

By THOMAS KIRBY.

It is seldom that a ball club has two men who stand one, two in the individual rating in any department of baseball, but that's what Washington possesses in Milan and Daniel Moeller, whose home is in Des Moines, Iowa, is a product of the intercollegiate diamond, having learned the game at Milliken University, which also graduated Paul Smith to the Nationals. While Moel-ler was yet an undergraduate, he saw a way to corral coin and fool the watch dogs of eligibility by going into Vermont and playing with the Montpeller club of the Northern League, under the name of "Moore." At that time-1906-Moeller was a catcher and, as the Northern League was an outlaw circuit, outside the realm of organized baseball, the Troy, N. Y., club saw a chance to grab a promising player without purchasing so in 1907 Moeller was with Broy. At Troy Moeiler started to develop into an outfielder and was purchased by Pittsburgh Nationals. He chased by Fittsburgh Nationals. He was not quite up to requirements so he was sent to Jersey City, in the Eastern League. In '910 he figured in a trade to Rochester where he remained until he was brought here in the fall of 1911.

Moeller is one of the fastest men on the hoof in the league, his lone drawback being his failure to clout as consistently as some of the others on the wheel.
